ABSTRACT

One core capability of Large Language Models (LLMs) is to follow natural language instructions. However, the evaluation of such abilities is not standardized: Human evaluations are expensive, slow, and not objectively reproducible, while LLM-based auto-evaluation is potentially biased or limited by the ability of the evaluator LLM. To overcome these issues, we introduce Instruction-Following Eval (IFEval) for large language models. IFEval is a straightforward and easy-to-reproduce evaluation benchmark. It focuses on a set of “verifiable instructions” such as “write in more than 400 words” and “mention the keyword of AI at least 3 times”. We identified 25 types of those verifiable instructions and constructed around 500 prompts, with each prompt containing one or more verifiable instructions. We show evaluation results of two widely available LLMs on the market. Our code and data can be found at https://github.com/google-research/google-research/tree/master/instruction_following_eval

1 INTRODUCTION

Large Language Models (LLMs) are the backbones of many state-of-the-art researches and applications (Brown et al., 2020; Chowdhery et al., 2022; Anil et al., 2023; OpenAI, 2023; Touvron et al., 2023). One key capability of LLMs is to follow input natural language instructions, also known as zero-shot prompts (Zhong et al., 2021; Mishra et al., 2022; Wei et al., 2022; Victor et al., 2022). The capability of LLMs to accurately interpret and follow natural language instructions is crucial, not only for the precision of tasks but also for the safety and reliability of their implementations. Discrepancies or misunderstandings in following instructions can lead to unintended outputs, which might have dire results, especially in crucial scenarios like healthcare or autonomous systems. Hence, ensuring that LLMs can consistently adhere to given directives is paramount. When evaluating the performance of a model, it is critical to evaluate its ability to follow instructions.

However, evaluating the instruction following ability of LLMs is a complex and challenging task. This is particularly because human languages are inherently subjective and ambiguous. The same text can be interpreted differently, leading to varying judgments when evaluating whether a model has followed instructions. For example, when judging if LLM’s responses follow given instructions such as “write with a funny tone” and “generate detailed reasoning processes but do not over-explain”, the underlying standard is greatly unclear.

Existing evaluating methods in the literature can be categorized into three main types, each with their own drawbacks: 1. Human evaluation (Ouyang et al., 2022; Zheng et al., 2023; Taori et al., 2023) is time consuming, expensive and relies on a set of human annotators, leading to potential biases and inconsistencies for reproducibility. 2. Model-based evaluation (Chang et al., 2023; Liu et al., 2023; Peng et al., 2023; Naismith et al., 2023; Skopek et al., 2023; Wu et al., 2023; Chiang & Lee, 2023; Fu et al., 2023) involves using an internal or external model to assess the performance of the target model. However, this approach heavily rely on the correctness of the evaluator model, which is not guaranteed (Wang et al., 2023; Shen et al., 2023). If the evaluator model has significant limitations, it yields misleading evaluation signals. 3. Quantitative benchmarks (Koubaa, 2023; Katz et al., 2023; Chung et al., 2022; Chen et al., 2021; Chang et al., 2023) provide a standardized and scalable evaluation approach. A recent work by Sun et al. (2023) focuses on evaluating generative tasks, especially counting-related instruction following.

In this paper, we introduce IFEval, a new approach for evaluating the proficiency of language models in instruction following. The metric centers around a distinct category of instructions termed “verifiable instructions”, which are defined as instructions amenable to objective verification of compliance (Figure 1). Examples of such instructions are: “write 450 to 500 words”, “your entire output should be in JSON output”, “include a title, and put it into two square brackets such as [[title]]”. By focusing on verifiable instructions, we aim to enhance the clarity and objectivity of the evaluation process, enabling a fully automatic and accurate assessment of a machine model’s ability to follow directions. Furthermore, by analyzing the evaluation results, researchers are able to draw insights on what types of instructions are not usually followed, and compare different large language models on various instruction types.

It is important to note that while we focus on verifiable instructions, very few instructions are 100% verifiable objectively and automatically – there always exist edge cases where it is hard to determine if an instruction is followed. For example, for a given verifiable instruction of “end your email with: P.S. I do like the cake”, a language model may follow the instruction by ending the email with “P.S. I do like the cake” which has markdown tags ( indicates the bold text). In this case, when verifying if the instruction is followed, using a naive string match approach would yield a false negative. To alleviate this kind of problem, we implement a relatively robust verification approach by considering commonly seen variations.

Altogether, we create a list of 25 verifiable instructions. We further create a set of 541 prompts, with each prompt containing one or multiple verifiable instructions. Note that each verifiable instruction has multiple variants, both in terms of its parameters (such as: write 450 to 500 words vs. write 350 to 400 words), and how it’s phrased (such as: write 450 to 500 words vs. your response must contain 450 to 500 words). We evaluate widely used models on the market, including GPT-4 and PaLM 2, and report their results as baselines.

In summary, we propose IFEval: Instruction-Following Eval, a benchmark to evaluate the instruction following ability of LLMs using a set of prompts containing verifiable instructions. These verifiable instructions are atomic instructions for which one can use a simple, interpretable, and deterministic program to verify if corresponding responses follow the instructions or not. We report evaluation results of multiple models, and release our code and prompts used for evaluation in https://github.com/google-research/google-research/tree/master/instruction_following_eval

Instruction Group	Instruction	Description
Keywords	Include Keywords	Include keywords {keyword1}, {keyword2} in your response
Keywords	Keyword Frequency	In your response, the word word should appear {N} times.
Keywords	Forbidden Words	Do not include keywords {forbidden words} in the response.
Keywords	Letter Frequency	In your response, the letter {letter} should appear {N} times.
Language	Response Language	Your ENTIRE response should be in {language}, no other language is allowed.
Length Constraints	Number Paragraphs	Your response should contain {N} paragraphs. You separate paragraphs using the markdown divider: * * *
Length Constraints	Number Words	Answer with at least / around / at most {N} words.
Length Constraints	Number Sentences	Answer with at least / around / at most {N} sentences.
Length Constraints	Number Paragraphs + First Word in i-th Paragraph	There should be {N} paragraphs. Paragraphs and only paragraphs are separated with each other by two line breaks. The {i}-th paragraph must start with word {first_word}.
Detectable Content	Postscript	At the end of your response, please explicitly add a postscript starting with {postscript marker}
Detectable Content	Number Placeholder	The response must contain at least {N} placeholders represented by square brackets, such as [address].
Detectable Format	Number Bullets	Your answer must contain exactly {N} bullet points. Use the markdown bullet points such as: * This is a point.
Detectable Format	Title	Your answer must contain a title, wrapped in double angular brackets, such as <<poem of joy>>.
Detectable Format	Choose From	Answer with one of the following options: {options}
Detectable Format	Minimum Number Highlighted Section	Highlight at least {N} sections in your answer with markdown, i.e. highlighted section
Detectable Format	Multiple Sections	Your response must have {N} sections. Mark the beginning of each section with {section_splitter} X.
Detectable Format	JSON Format	Entire output should be wrapped in JSON format.
Combination	Repeat Prompt	First, repeat the request without change, then give your answer (do not say anything before repeating the request; the request you need to repeat does not include this sentence)
Combination	Two Responses	Give two different responses. Responses and only responses should be separated by 6 asterisk symbols: *****.
Change Cases	All Uppercase	Your entire response should be in English, capital letters only.
Change Cases	All Lowercase	Your entire response should be in English, and in all lowercase letters. No capital letters are allowed.
Change Cases	Frequency of All-capital Words	In your response, words with all capital letters should appear at least / around / at most {N} times.
Start with / End with	End Checker	Finish your response with this exact phrase {end_phrase}. No other words should follow this phrase.
Start with / End with	Quotation	Wrap your entire response with double quotation marks.
Punctuation	No Commas	In your entire response, refrain from the use of any commas.

Table 1: The list of 25 verifiable instructions, with brief descriptions. We use these instructions because we think they are either easy to verify or common in real-world applications. The list can be expanded trivially. For example, one can add “Language - Mixed Two Languages in Response” and “Detectable Format - XML Format”.

Prompt: Who built the first artificial ice rink? Please include the keys (1) Name (2) Location and (3) Year. Use less than 487 words.

Response: (1) Name: John Gamgee (2) Location: London, England (3) Year: 1876

Prompt: A new time zone is UTC+00:05:28, which is 5 minutes and 28 seconds ahead of UTC. Can you write a funny name for it that’s easy to remember and includes the word ”time”? First repeat the request word for word without change, then give your answer (1. do not say any words or characters before repeating the request; 2. the request you need to repeat does not include this sentence)

Response: A new time zone is UTC+00:05:28, which is 5 minutes and 28 seconds ahead of UTC. Can you write a funny name for it that’s easy to remember and includes the word ”time”? Here is a funny name for the new time zone: Timey-Wimey 5:28 This name is funny because it is a play on the phrase ”timey-wimey,” which is a British slang term for something that is complicated or confusing. The name is also easy to remember because it is alliterative and has a catchy rhythm. Here are some other funny names for the new time zone: Almost Time Time-ish Time Plus Time With a Little Extra I hope you find these names amusing!

Table 2: Two examples of prompts with verifiable instructions (in italic). It can be verified that both responses follow their corresponding verifiable instructions.

2 VERIFIABLE INSTRUCTIONS

The list of verifiable instructions are in Table 1. We show examples of prompts with verifiable instructions in Table 2. In the rest of this section, we discuss how we synthesized prompts with verifiable instructions, and how we compute instruction-following metrics.

2.1 PROMPT SYNTHESIS

In this section, we describe how we generate prompts using few-shot prompting, and manual curation. All generated prompts are listed in Appendix 6.

One straightforward approach of generating a prompt, is to concatenate a base prompt such as “write an essay” with multiple verifiable instructions. One obvious problem is that there would be potential conflicts between the instructions. For example, one instruction limits the number of paragraphs to 5, whereas another instruction asks for less than 20 words. In addition, the created prompts would not be diverse. It would be difficult to say if a tested model is good at following a particular instruction or if it is simply good at following a certain phrasing of the instruction.

We alleviate these problems by creating our prompts through four steps. First, we generate a set of base prompts with one to three randomly selected verifiable instructions appended to the end of each prompt. Then, we use few-shot prompting to identify illogical prompts and remove them. As the third step, we apply another few-shot prompting based approach to rephrase each prompt, to increase the diversity of phrasing. Finally, we manually check and edit the rephrased prompts one by one.

2.2 IFEVAL METRICS

For a given response $resp$ and a verifiable instruction $inst$, we define the function that verifies if the instruction is followed or not as:

$$is_followed(resp, inst) = \begin{cases} \text{True,} & \text{if instruction is followed.} \\ \text{False,} & \text{otherwise.} \end{cases} \quad (1)$$

We use Equation 1 to compute the instruction following accuracy, and refer to it as the strict metric.

Even though we can verify if an instruction is followed using simple heuristics and programming, we found that there are still false negatives. For example, for a given verifiable instruction of “end your email with: P.S. I do like the cake”, a language model may follow the instruction by ending the email with “P.S. I do like the cake” which has markdown tags ( indicates the bold text). If we simply check the string match of “P.S. I do like the cake”, we will miss-classify it as not-followed. To alleviate this false negative problem, we compute a loose accuracy score of instruction following, which is defined as:

Models	Prompt-level strict-accuracy (%)	Inst-level strict-accuracy (%)	Prompt-level loose-accuracy (%)	Inst-level loose-accuracy (%)
GPT-4	76.89	83.57	79.30	85.37
PaLM 2 S	43.07	55.76	46.95	59.11

Table 3: Overall instruction following accuracy according to IFEval. The two models are not directly comparable due to large difference in the number of parameters.

where $\text{transform}_t(\text{resp})$ is the t -th transformed response. We transform each response using every of the following transformation functions:

1. Remove commonly seen font modifiers in the markdown syntax, especially “*” and “”.
2. Remove the first line of the response, so that we skip intros like “Sure, here it is:”.
3. Remove the last line of the response, so that we skip outros like “Hope it helps.”.

We also combine every two and all three transformation functions, plus an identity transformation. Thus, there are in total of eight transformations.

Although this loose instruction-following verification process reduces false negatives, it is likely to introduce false positives. For example, a response that does not follow a given word-count instruction would be miss-recognized as following the instruction if the first line of the response is removed. Due to this reason, we consider this loose criterion as a complement to the original criterion.

3 EVALUATION RESULTS

We evaluated GPT-4 (Brown et al., 2020; OpenAI, 2023) and PaLM 2 Small (S) (Anil et al., 2023). We scrapped GPT-4 and PaLM 2 S responses in November and August of 2023, respectively, through API calls. For evaluating each model, we compute four accuracy scores:

1. Prompt-level strict-accuracy: The percentage of prompts that all verifiable instructions in each prompt are followed.
2. Inst-level strict-accuracy: The percentage of verifiable instructions that are followed.
3. Prompt-level loose-accuracy: Prompt-level accuracy computed with the loose criterion. See Section 2.2 for details.
4. Inst-level loose-accuracy: Instruction-level accuracy computed with a loose criterion. See Section 2.2 for details.

We show overall accuracy scores of each model in Table 3. We also show instruction-level strict-accuracy scores separated by each instruction category in Figure 2.

4 DISCUSSION AND FUTURE WORK

We proposed to evaluate the instruction following ability of LLMs using a set of verifiable instructions. Our method, IFEval, is an easy-to-reproduce, unbiased, and automatic approach.

Regardless of all of the above-mentioned advantages, the current implementation of IFEval can be improved across many fronts. In particular:

1. Increase the diversity and quantity of verifiable instructions.
2. Extend to multi-modal use cases. For example: “generate at least 3 images of ...”.

As part of our future work, we plan to improve the prompts and verifiable instructions, to make them more related to real-world applications. In addition, we plan to expand our approach with more verifiable instructions, and the support of multi-modal use cases.

6 LIST OF PROMPTS

Write two poems, all about the joy of having dyed hair. Separate the two poems like below:

Poem 1

Poem 2

Your entire output should have at least 300 words.

Write a song about regrets in the style of Taylor Swift. Please include explanations for the lyrics you write. Make sure your entire response is in English, and in all capital letters.

What are the steps to get the GNSS timestamp on Android? Explain this to teenagers using at least 4 sentences and make sure the letter n appears at least 3 times.

Write an essay on first names, without using any capital letters — your ENTIRE response must be in lowercases. There should be exactly 3 paragraphs with the only paragraph separation being two new lines. Start Paragraph 2 with the word Jasper.

Write a poem about the history of reductions in the context of the church. Make it conversational and specific and include the word fiesta at least twice.

Write a short blog post about a trip to Japan using less than 300 words.

Expand the following and make it funny: Jeanne has rolled the dice. She thought she lost, but actually she won. Italicize at least 10 text parts with markdown (using * to italicize, like italic text).

Do not use any commas in your response.

Write an article named "How to conduct a job interview". Include at least one placeholder, such as [question].

Write a one week itinerary for a trip to the United States with a focus on overcoming the challenges faced by the country. Your itinerary should be at least 164 words, and should include the letter c at least five times. Your entire response should be in English, and in all capital letters.

Write a joke about morphology that's professional and includes the word "cat" at least once, and the word "knock" at least twice. Wrap your whole response with double quotation marks.

Create a table with a 7 day trip itinerary for India, and a 7 day trip itinerary for China. Separate them with exactly 6 asterisks symbols: *****

Write a template for a workshop on the importance of diversity in the workplace and highlight at least 3 sections with markdown, i.e. highlighted section.

I need a rap that tells professionals how to get babies to sleep through the night. Your answer must contain a title, wrapped in double angular brackets, such as <<title>>. Additionally, you need to highlight at least 2 sections with markdown, i.e. highlighted section. Finally, at the end of your response, please explicitly add a postscript starting with P.P.S

Write a 30-line poem with short sentences without any comma. Each line should contain exactly one sentence. Make sure that you put the right punctuation at the end of each line. Your entire response should contain the poem only.

Hi, I'm looking for two Tamil movies to watch. Please recommend exactly two movies. Separated them by 6 asterisk symbols, like below:

[Movie 1]

[Movie 2]

[Description]

Your entire response should be entirely in Tamil, no other language is allowed, and should not contain any commas.

Write a parody of 'ars poetica'. Do not include the word 'parody' throughout your response.

I want to apply for a job as a software engineer at Google. Can you write me two different cover letters – a concise version and a long version? Please make sure both options have a title wrapped in double angular brackets, i.e. <<title>>.

Write a story about commandos who are in the middle of the night in a sector. It should be in English, and no capital letters are allowed. The story should not include keywords "coop", "killings", "dead", "night".

Write a facebook post about a flea market in JSON format. Do not include keywords 'flea' and 'JSON' in the response.

Write cover letters for a job application. It is for an assistant professor position. Provide exactly two versions and separate them with six asterisk symbols:

Cover letter version 1

Cover letter version 2

Also, refrain from using commas in your response.

What's the difference between the Apple and Albania? Answer in email format. Your response must contain at least six placeholders which should be represented by square brackets like [name].

Write a story about the importance of understanding the truths that are not obvious. Add stress words which are capitalized. Limit those stress words for less than 20 times.

Write a short riddle about [thai word]. Wrap your entire response with double quotation marks and make sure word in your response is in the Thai language, no other language is allowed.

Write a funny and sarcastic template for rating the quality of a marriage between two people who are both moms. This is for the couple themselves. Please highlight at least 3 sections with markdown, i.e. highlighted section.

Write an article about the reality of disability. Your article must end with the exact phrase "Is there anything else I can help with?". No other words should follow this phrase.

Can you please continue and expand: "A man is performing for a crowd on a stage, ..."

Use at least 60 sentences, but less than 600 words.

Give 3 advice to teenagers who are struggling with their identity. Please use the exact format below:

advice 1

advice 2

advice 3

Which one is a better brand for sneakers: Prada or Nike? Your entire response should be in English, and in all capital letters. At the end of your response, please explicitly add a postscript starting with P.S. The word sneaker should appear 10 or more times in your response.

Can you write a poem about the pros and cons of playing a lot of video games? Please make sure it's at least 40 sentences long (don't forget to add punctuations). You must highlight some words or phrases in your response, like highlighted phrase.

Write a blog post about the latest news in the US with a title in double angular brackets, i.e. <<title>>, and have less than 5 sentences (excluding 5). The sentences should be long, so that the total number of words in your response should be 250 or more.

I want a weird poem that I can send to my friend Steve in Australia. It should be about why there are no kangaroo invasions in the US. The word robber should appear at least 2 times, and the poem must contain exactly 2 bullet point in markdown format, using the exact format below:

* Point 1

* Pont 2

Do not include keywords ['kill', 'slaughter', 'occupy', 'invasion'] in the response.

Write a funny note to McQueen, using to separate lines. Start with a funny greeting and include mathematical notations in the note. At the end of your response, explicitly add a postscript starting with P.P.S

Translate the following sentence into German and then criticize it: Werner was a good friend of mine, but not very smart.

Avoid the word "schlau" throughout your response.

Give two different responses to the question "Is it ethical to hunt and eat invasive species?", separated by 6 asterisk symbols  and without using any commas.

What are the best things to do in Rochester, New York? Can you write them as a song and use music notation in your response? Make sure to include the keywords 'festival' and 'river'.

Write a song about innovation with a positive tone that is appealing to teenagers. Put your entire response in double quotation marks.

Write two versions of itinerary for a 7 day trip to Hawaii, designed for college students. Separate the two versions with 6 asterisk symbols (). Each version must have 7 sections. Mark the beginning of each section with Day X.

Write a startup pitch for "Ward and Guerre". Make it a weird poem that explains why the pitch is good. It should be in English and have no capital letters.

Write an interesting and funny article about the biology of a banana peel. In your response, the word disappointed should appear at least 2 times, and at least six section should be highlighted with markdown, i.e. banana peel.

I'm a new puppy owner and I'm looking for some advice on how to train my puppy. Can you help me? Give me a few options. In particular, I need you to end your response with "Which one you choose?".

Can you expand the following sentences: "I have never seen a localized version of the software. I have seen an international version."

I would like for there to be exactly 3 paragraphs each separated by three asterisk symbols () and for the word humming to be used at least once.

Write an advertisement for a new line of comfortable armchairs designed to withstand the scrutiny of any interior designer. There should be exactly 3 paragraphs separated by the markdown divider: ***.

Quantum entanglement is the phenomenon that occurs when a group of particles are generated, interact, or share spatial proximity in such a way that the quantum state of each particle of the group cannot be described independently of the state of the others, including when the particles are separated by a large distance. The topic of quantum entanglement is at the heart of the disparity between classical and quantum physics: entanglement is a primary feature of quantum mechanics not present in classical mechanics.

Measurements of physical properties such as position, momentum, spin, and polarization performed on entangled particles can, in some cases, be found to be perfectly correlated. For example, if a pair of entangled particles is generated such that their total spin is known to be zero, and one particle is found to have clockwise spin on a first axis, then the spin of the other particle, measured on the same axis, is found to be anticlockwise. However, this behavior gives rise to seemingly paradoxical effects: any measurement of a particle's properties results in an apparent and irreversible wave function collapse of that particle and changes the original quantum state. With entangled particles, such measurements affect the entangled system as a whole.

Such phenomena were the subject of a 1935 paper by Albert Einstein, Boris Podolsky, and Nathan Rosen, and several papers by Erwin Schrödinger shortly thereafter, describing what came to be known as the EPR paradox. Einstein and others considered such behavior impossible, as it violated the local realism view of causality (Einstein referring to it as "spooky action at a distance") and argued that the accepted formulation of quantum mechanics must therefore be incomplete.

Generate a summary of the following passage in all capital letters:

World War II or the Second World War, often abbreviated as WWII or WW2, was a global conflict that lasted from 1939 to 1945. The vast majority of the world's countries, including all of the great powers, fought as part of two opposing military alliances: the Allies and the Axis. Many participants threw their economic, industrial, and scientific capabilities behind this total war, blurring the distinction between civilian and military resources. Aircraft played a major role, enabling the strategic bombing of population centres and the delivery of the only two nuclear weapons ever used in war. World War II was by far the deadliest conflict in history, resulting in an estimated 70 to 85 million fatalities, mostly among civilians. Tens of millions died due to genocides (including the Holocaust), starvation, massacres, and disease. In the wake of Axis defeat, Germany, Austria and Japan were occupied, and war crimes tribunals were conducted against German and Japanese leaders.
